Performance review

In a very strong market, the OC Dynamic Equity Fund returned 4.4% for the month of October. Although the Fund underperformed both the S&P/ASX Small Ordinaries Accumulation and the S&P/ASX Small Industrials Accumulation Indices, which were up 7.1% and 5.8% respectively for the month, it was a credible performance given the Fund's strong outperformance over the previous quarter. For the past three years, the Fund has returned 21.8% p.a., well ahead of both the S&P/ASX Small Ordinaries Accumulation and the S&P/ASX Small Industrials Accumulation Indices, which were up 0.6% and 11.5% respectively over the same period.

APN Outdoor (APO) (+24.4%) - the outdoor media sector has continued its strong momentum in recent months with year-to-date revenue up 17.1% versus the prior corresponding period. Late in the month, APO upgraded its prospectus forecasts for a second time following its upgrade at the half-year result in August. The company's pro forma EBITDA is now forecast to be between $68.0m and $69.5m for CY15, well ahead of the forecast it issued at its IPO in November 2014 ($53.7m). We have been extremely bullish on the out-of-home advertising space over the past 12 months and own all three ASX-listed players, namely APN Outdoor, oOh!Media Limited and QMS Media Limited. One of the drivers behind the industry's growth is the conversion of static billboards to digital (which typically generates a revenue uplift of three to five times) and attracting advertising dollars that have previously been directed toward other mediums. We remain upbeat on all three stocks each with management teams we hold in high regard. We expect the earnings upgrade cycle to continue into the medium term which ought to underpin strong share price performance.

The Fund's wealth management exposure performed strongly during the month with Henderson Group (HGG) up 11.4%, Magellan Financial Group (MFG) up 18.6% and BT Investment Management (BTT) up 24.4%. Both HGG and BTT reported excellent profit results during the month and MFG reported further strong fund inflows at institutional and retail levels. All three companies have qualities we consider essential to any successful asset management company: brand names that are recognised and trusted, credible asset managers with excellent long-term track records and high quality distribution teams that are capitalising on the strong performance of the managers. All three companies are well positioned to continue to grow funds under management strongly in the coming year and remain core holdings of the Fund.

Webjet (WEB) (+18.7%) - recent portfolio addition, WEB, was a strong performer during the month. WEB is likely to be known to many of our investors as it operates Australia's largest independent travel website. The company specialises in domestic and international online flight bookings which is where it derives the bulk of its revenues. Despite many competitive threats over the years, WEB continues to deliver very strong revenue growth in its core flights business. It also has a growing accommodation business which is showing excellent growth prospects, particularly in the Middle East and Africa. We are attracted to WEB's capital-light, high-growth business model and the company is now a core portfolio holding.

Simonds Group (SIO) (-13.5%) - the portfolio was negatively impacted by the performance of mass market home builder, SIO, which fell on the back of increasing concerns the Australian housing market is "topping out" and the exit of their well-regarded Managing Director, Paul McMahon. SIO is one of Australia's largest home builders (2,400 housing starts in 2015) and also runs its own nationally accredited training academy, but since its IPO just over 12 months ago its share price performance has been disappointing (-30%). SIO is pushing its building business into new markets in NSW and Queensland and is rapidly expanding its Builders Academy business which we see as highly complementary to its core business. We continue to believe SIO represents good value at 7.5x FY16 earnings and that the depth of management within the company is strong enough to effectively transition the Managing Director role. The SIO board has also recognised the compelling valuation opportunity and has recently launched a share buy-back which has been active and will be earnings per share accretive at levels significantly higher than the current share price.

Outlook

The domestic economic environment remains subdued with little changing during the month to influence our portfolio positioning. Economic growth in Australia remains below longer-term averages, despite record low interest rates. The consumer environment remains challenging and the RBA's decision to leave rates on hold at 2.00% at the November meeting means retailers did not get a 'sugar hit' ahead of the important Christmas trading period. Business investment continues to be subdued and infrastructure spending outside of NSW continues to be delayed by political in-fighting. The housing market, which has been an area of strength, remains robust but is showing early signs it may have peaked. As a result of these factors, we remain underweight stocks that require a strong domestic economy to grow their earnings. Notably, however, the RBA moved to a clear easing bias in its November statement and we expect a cut may come as soon as its next meeting in early December.

In the US, the Federal Reserve is expected to start raising interest rates in the coming months. The US economy is now on a solid footing, with strong job creation in recent years seeing the unemployment rate fall to 5.1% by September. The slack in the US economy created during the GFC has now diminished to a point where inflationary pressures ought to start to build in the economy in the coming years. We expect the Federal Reserve to gradually raise interest rates in the coming months to prevent speculative forces in financial markets from flaring up which could lead to inappropriate risk-taking that might undermine financial stability.

The OC portfolio retains a healthy exposure to the US economy including Fisher & Paykel Healthcare, Ardent Leisure, Servcorp, Altium and Aconex. While the Australian dollar has stabilised at around US$0.70, these companies continue to be beneficiaries of the translational impact of a lower Australian dollar.

After a sustained period of underperformance versus their larger-cap peers, it is pleasing to see Australian small-cap stocks have begun to outperform their large-cap peers. While the large-cap index is being weighed down by the major banks and resource heavyweights, BHP and RIO, the small-companies universe includes a wide variety of companies exposed to many different investment thematics. Given the prevailing macro influences, we expect small caps are well positioned to outperform in the medium term.

One of the advantages of investing in small to mid-cap companies in Australia is that despite the structural and macro issues facing the economy, it is always possible to find sectors and stocks that are performing well. Our portfolio continues to be underpinned by companies that can grow their earnings largely outside of the economic cycle including Fisher & Paykel Healthcare, Veda Group and Healthscope, as well as companies exposed to the resilient US economy such as Altium, Hansen Technologies, Ardent Leisure and Pacific Current (formerly Treasury Group). There is also a raft of stocks that have structural factors underpinning their earnings growth such as outdoor media companies APN Outdoor, oOh!Media Limited and QMS Media Limited and companies with innovative business models, such as Ozforex Group and iSentia Group.

During November, many of the companies in our stock universe hold their Annual General Meetings (AGMs) during which they often provide commentary on trading to date in the current financial year, as well as the outlook for the balance of the financial year. We are confident our portfolio holdings have had a solid start to FY16 and we will update our investors on material news that comes out of the AGMs in our next performance update.
